asle-uki

The Association for the Study of Literature and Environment (UK and Ireland) was founded in 1998. Our aim is to represent and support scholars, writers, and artists in the Atlantic archipelago and beyond, interested in the environment and its expression in the cultural imagination.

We provide a forum for 'environmental criticism' and 'ecocriticism', that is, the study of the intricate relationships between human and nonhuman environments, broadly construed. We are motivated by a commitment to ecologically sound practices and politics, but, above all, we seek to foster a spirit of open dialogue and intellectual curiosity about how 'nature' and 'environment' exist in our lives.

Membership benefits include subscription to the ASLE-UKI journal Green Letters; free online subscription to an additional Routledge journal; regular news by email about conferences, new publications, funding opportunities and other activities; eligibility for prizes and travel bursaries; and eligibility to give papers at ASLE-UKI conferences and those of our international affiliates.
